TIMELY SPRAYING IS MOST IMPORTANT
By Donald B. Ridley, County Agent

If the present cool, rainy weather conditions continue so as to prolong the blossoming period very much, there will be considerable danger of scab infection during that period.

Under these conditions it would seem advisable to put on an application of plain lime-sulphur spray or sulphur dust, between now and the Calyx Application. Scab develops in cool damp weather.

Each man must use his own judgement of course, and should consider the time that his last application was made. If this is put on during blossom, lead should not be used as it will poison the bees and other insects. Do not think that an application at this time will do away with the Calyx Spray, however, for it is then that the Codling Moth and Carveo are controlled. Nicotine can be used in the special application if Aphids are present.

Timeliness never can be substituted by thoroughness during these first applications including the Calyx. Many are influenced in their spray program by the fact that scab development has not "shown up" yet. By the time scab shows up it is too late to do much except kick about it. Get the habit of watching the weather and follow a complete schedule.

Mr. and Mrs. James Walker moved into the downstairs room at the Dennis Pike house on Winter street, recently vacated by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cummings, who have moved to North Waterford.

Extensive improvements are being made on the Norway Water Co. system. Immediate changes include a hydrant re-laying on Whitman street, corner Summer street and general repairs on a hydrant near the shoe shop on Beal street.

Roadside Improvement

County Contests to Begin in June

At a largely attended meeting at Augusta of the Roadside Improvement Committee of the Maine Development Commission acting under the chairmanship of Mrs. Joseph W. Simpson of York Harbor, the initial steps towards improving the appearance of the roadsides of Maine was taken. The committee, which is the first co-operative committee set up by the Commission composed entirely of women, has sixteen members, one from each County in the State. In the establishment of the committee, the Commission received splendid co-operation from the Maine Federation of Women's Clubs and the State Business and Professional Women's Club, each of which organizations is represented by one member on the Committee. The list of members, with their address and the county from which they come, is as follows:

Androscoggin—Mrs. H. E. Chittenden, Auburn.
Arctostok—Senator Dora Plinkham, Fort Kent.
Cumberland—to be announced later.

Franklin—Miss Lelia H. Hunsnewell, King's Falls.
Hancock—Mrs. W. A. Alexander, Ellsworth.
Kennebec—Mrs. William R. Pattangall, Augusta.

Knock—Miss Theresa Aran, Camden.
Lincoln—Mrs. Maudie Clark Gay, Waldoboro.
Oxford—Miss Gwendolyn Brackett, Fryeburg.

Penobscot—Mrs. J. H. Haddiston, Orono.
Piscataquis—Mrs. C. S. Douglas, Ellsworth.
Sagadahoc—Mrs. Arthur Sewall, Bath.
Somerset—Mrs. Frank H. Holley, North Amherst.

Waldo—Mrs. J. W. Blaisdell, Belfast.
Washington—Mrs. Jane Todd Higgins, Calais.
York—Mrs. Joseph W. Simpson, York Harbor.

At this recent meeting it was decided to hold a contest in the summer of 1930 for the greatest improvement of the roadsides in the county in the form of building grounds and approaches of, and in the service rendered at wayside establishments, which, for the purpose of the contests, will be divided as follows:

1. Wayside markets, to include refreshment stands. 2. Filling stations, i. e. establishments where the major activity is the sale of gas and oil. This is limited to stations operated under ownership of the county or under a franchise.

There will be frequent inspections of the Wayside establishments entering the contest by the County Committee between June 15th and September 15th, on which latter date the contest ends.

At its meeting the committee decided many details with reference to the contest, the governing factors of which, in determining the provision of this act shall be: appearance of buildings, 40 per cent.; appearance of grounds and approaches, 30 per cent.; service, 30 per cent. The contest will be conducted at first on a county basis, the winners of the county contest to enter a statewide contest in each of the three classes of establishments.

County contest prizes to be awarded will be as follows:
Wayside markets—1st prize, $15.00; 2nd prize, $10.00; 3rd prize, $5.00.
Filling stations—1st prize, $15.00; 2nd prize, $10.00; 3rd prize, $5.00.
Overnight camps—1st prize, $15.00; 2nd prize, $10.00; 3rd prize, $5.00.

In addition to receiving the cash prize each winner will be given a small sign to attach to his establishment showing his rating in the various contests. All contestants, whether winners of prizes or not, will be given a certificate to place in his establishment showing that he is operating in the Wayside Improvement Movement of the State of Maine.

The Publicity Department of the Maine Development Commission will give publicity to the winners through articles and pictures in the newspapers. Information as to the details of the contest may be secured in each county from the county chairman.

The purpose behind all this movement is to solicit the aid of the people of the state in rendering more pleasing the great natural beauties of our roadsides. Also, through improvement in the appearance of the various types of establishments along our roadsides to assist the owners in securing larger returns on their investment. For it is today recognized that the three major principles of good merchandizing are, first, that an attractive exterior is what catches the customer's eye; second, that the merchandise sold must be of the quality represented; and third, that good service must be rendered in selling the merchandise in order to induce the buyer to repeat his orders or send his friends.

FRYEBURG
The Saco Valley United Parish is holding a School of Instruction for Sunday School Workers at the Harbor church. The sessions began Monday, conducted by Deputy State Sunday School Worker, Miss Louise Perry, and will continue for five consecutive evenings this week.

Callers at George Gupitill's, Sunday, were Percy McKee, Ralph McAllister, Walter Laroque and two daughters and Carroll McAllister, wife and baby.

4-H JUDGING CONTESTS
Twenty-five judging contests have been held in Oxford County already. Twenty contests have been on sewing, two on potatoes, one on room improvement and three on cooking housekeeping.

Each club is holding a judging contest on the project which is being carried. Five products are selected and the club members are asked to place them in order of their merits. This is one of the requirements in getting a National Seal of Achievement. These contests help the boys and girls in preparing their exhibits.

Several contests will be held during the summer. These will probably be some on vegetables, chickens and other projects.

The McWain 4-H Club at East Waterford of which Mrs. Marjorie Foster is leader, will judge mulligans, May 22. On Friday, May 23, the Folch 4-H Club at West Paris, of which Miss Leone Bane is leader, will judge hems.

Along the Highway

Move Being Made by Chief of Highway Police to Make Clean-Up

General James W. Hanson, Chief of State Highway Police in talking over the cleaning up of signs along the highways, said, "I am receiving from time to time complaints concerning the erection of signs within the limits of the highway. The violation of the law."

Laws regulating the placing of signs within the limits of the highways of the state and also their location in such a manner that no unrestricted view of the road would be interrupted. It is believed that with thought and care on the part of those desiring to maintain advertising signs, in properly locating the same outside the limits of the highway, would reduce in a great measure complaints now being received and the cooperation of advertisers, proprietors of summer camps, roadside stands and others, will be appreciated in an effort to make our highways safe and attractive to our visitors from other States."

The laws relating to the erection of signs within the limits of the highway are as follows:

Section 2. No person shall post, erect, display or maintain or cause to be posted, erected, displayed or maintained any sign, billboard, panel, placard, poster, notice or other advertising device, or so situated with respect to any public highway as to obstruct clear vision of an intersecting highway or highways or otherwise so situated as to prevent the safe use of the public highway; and such signs, billboard, panel, placard, poster, notice or other advertising device existing within the limits of the highway in violation thereof.

Provided, that the provisions hereof shall not apply to the state or to any person holding title thereto or to signs erected or maintained with the approval of the state highway commission solely for the purpose of safeguarding, facilitating or protecting travel along the highway; and provided further that the state highway commission may order the placing of directional signs of such design as it shall determine, not exceeding thirty inches in length and nine inches in width to designate the location of such signs, billboard, panel, placard, poster, notice or other advertising device to the state at the junction of roads in the town where the place is located and in adjoining towns.

Section 3. Any person found guilty of violating the provision of this act shall be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than five hundred dollars; and whoever after conviction of such violation unlawfully maintains any such sign, billboard, panel, placard, poster, notice or other advertising device for ten days after such conviction may be punished by a further fine of not more than fifty dollars for each day upon which the sign, billboard, panel, placard, poster, notice or other advertising device is maintained. Municipal courts and trial justice shall have jurisdiction to punish offenses under this act. The state highway police shall remove all signs, billboard, poster, notice or other advertising device existing within the limits of the highway in violation thereof."

The Rise of Tom Hadley

By C. F. Whitman

Chapter III
The Storm Breaks

Promptly at a quarter of ten a. m., Tom, accompanied by Jim, entered the hall where his trial was to be held and took seats near the magistrate's desk. The people had already begun to fill the places provided for the spectators.

Seeing the officer appeared, and sitting down near Tom, asked him in a low voice if he would accept service of the warrant, without a formal arrest.

"Certainly, and thank you, Mr. Stinson," the latter whispered. "Old Dave wanted me to arrest you, out in the square before a crowd of people, and put the handcuffs on you. He said Peters told me to tell you to do it. I said to him, 'I'd like to arrest you wherever I found you,' and he smiled. Stinson was a good official. He had integrity as well as ability, and knew how to discriminate between those who were really guilty and innocent persons falsely accused of offenses."

The next witness was Bill Smith and the Hadleys were seated well up to the court, but Bessie went to Tom and sat down by his side.

Joe Peters, with his client, Jake Barker, and his father, were shown to seats reserved for them by the officer. They sat at Tom, sitting in close proximity to them, but he took no notice of either and chatted cheerfully with Bessie.

Tom: "That is all with this witness."

The magistrate to witness: "Step aside." To Peters: "Call your next witness." This was Tom Jacobs. His statements were like Jake's testimony and animation.

Tom: "Do you know what the penalty is for telling a lie under oath in court?"

Jim: "No, I don't. Didn't know there was any."

Tom: "Well, there is, and a heavy one, too. What were you doing when the row between Jake and me commenced?"

The witness tried to catch the eye of Peters, but Tom prevented his doing so, and in a tone which fixed his gaze upon himself, he exclaimed: "Pay attention to me and answer my question."

Tom: "Not much of anything."

Tom: "Will you swear that you saw and heard all that took place between Jake and myself during the row?"

Jim: "Yes, I will."

Tom: "We will show that this witness is lying, your honor, but this is all I want of him." (Great sensation among the spectators.)

The next witness was Bill Smith and his statements were almost a repetition of those of Jim.

Peters, sarcastically: "The opposing counsel may inquire." This created some merriment among the partisans of Peters.

He, sarcastically: "Thanks for the privilege from the honorable gentleman." (Emphasis on the word honorable.)

The friends of Tom showed by a noiseless demonstration that they appreciated this bit and that they were in an overwhelming majority among the spectators.

A sharp colloquy between Tom and Bill followed.

Tom: "What did the trouble between Jake and me begin about?"

Bill: "Jake playing a game of pool with Jim."

Tom: "Now state the exact words I said to Jim."

Bill, hesitatingly: "I-I can't."

Tom: "Why not?"

Bill: "I-I didn't hear what you said."

Tom, decidedly: "Exactly! How do you know, then, that I said anything to him?"

Peters, trying to help his witness: "I object to this way of examining the witness."

Justice Adams: "On what ground, Mr. Peters?"

Peters: "He is confusing the witness."

Justice Adams: "It need not confuse him, if he is telling the truth. It is a proper question and he may answer."

I wish I could say as much of your young friend, Jake."

At this, a somewhat suppressed laugh was heard from the spectators.

Peters, with severity: "That remark, woman, about Jake, is entirely uncalled for. I suppose you approve of Tom telling away his time in a pool room. You know, of course, that he has the name of being a loafer."

Hannah: "Yes, he has been called so by such worthless creatures as have come into this court today with their mouths full of lies." (More sensation in the audience and thankfulness in the hearts of Mrs. Hadley and Bessie.)

Peters: "Do you know of even one thing that is good which Tom ever did? If so, tell us what it was."

Hannah: "Yes, I know of many good things he has done and not even one bad one. I live in one of your rents, don't I? And when Jim was sick and had to nurse him, so that I couldn't work out to get the means to pay the rent and you threatened to turn me out if I didn't pay up by the next Saturday afternoon. Tom gave me the money from some he had saved, when he must have needed it himself. Oh, you are a pretty man, you are, to call such a good, nice young man as Tom is, bad names!"

OKLA. FARMER KILLS 172 RATS IN ONE NIGHT

K-R-O (Kills Rats Only), writes Mr. —, Hubert, Okla., brought this remarkable result. K-R-O is the original sprout-mistle for the rat, an ingredient recommended by U. S. Government as sure death to rats and mice but harmless to dogs, cats, poultry or even baby chicks. You can depend on K-R-O (Kills Rats Only), which has become America's leading rat exterminator in just a few years. Sold by all druggists on a money back guarantee.

The magistrate then said: "After mature deliberation, it is my judgment and decision that the respondent, Tom Hadley, upon being struck by the accused, Jake Barker, was justified in striking back and that he used no more force than was necessary under the circumstances, to defend himself from a second blow, and in fact, therefore, not guilty, and he is accordingly discharged. And the court is adjourned."

The tumult that followed this decision is indescribable, many of Tom's friends among the boys shouted themselves hoarse. Bessie cried for joy and exclaimed, "Oh, Tom, you are free. You are free, and you have to go to prison. I'm so glad, I won't have to go to prison."

The Waterford Packing Co., to the Superior Court, in Equity, County of Oxford, ss.

Walter K. Hamlin, Plaintiff, vs. The Waterford Packing Co., Defendant.

To the Superior Court, in Equity, County of Oxford, ss.

The Waterford Packing Co., a corporation duly organized and existing under the Laws of Maine and located at said Waterford, Maine, says:

1. The Plaintiff is an officer, namely, Treasurer of the Waterford Packing Co., a corporation, legally called therefor and held as said Waterford on the twenty-fourth day of April, A. D. 1930, the said stockholders voted to dissolve said corporation.

2. There are no existing liabilities against said corporation and no existing assets thereof, requiring distribution among the stockholders.

Wherefore the Plaintiff prays: That the said corporation may be dissolved and terminated.

That the Plaintiff have such other and further relief as the nature of the case may require.

That such notice of this bill may be given to the defendant corporation as the court may see fit to order may be given to the defendant corporation as the court may see fit to order.

WALTER K. GRAY, Plaintiff, vs. The Waterford Packing Co., Defendant.

On the foregoing bill in Equity presented by Walter K. Hamlin against said Waterford Packing Company, praying that the stockholders of said company on the twenty-fourth day of April, A. D. 1930, voted to dissolve said corporation and praying a dissolution of said corporation.

Ordered, that a hearing be had on said bill at the Courtroom in the Village of South Paris in said County of Oxford, on the twenty-fourth day of June, A. D. 1930, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, and that notice of said hearing be given by serving an attested copy of said bill and this order of court thereon on said corporation fourteen days least before the date of said hearing (unless said corporation file its answer to said bill) and by publishing an attested copy of this order once a week for three successive weeks in the Norway Advertiser, a paper printed at Norway, in said County, the last publication to be seven days before the date of said hearing.

HARRY MANSEY, Justice of the Superior Court.

Donald B. Partridge, Clerk of Courts.

Government as sure death to rats and mice but harmless to dogs, cats, poultry or even baby chicks. You can depend on K-R-O (Kills Rats Only), which has become America's leading rat exterminator in just a few years. Sold by all druggists on a money back guarantee.

The magistrate then said: "After mature deliberation, it is my judgment and decision that the respondent, Tom Hadley, upon being struck by the accused, Jake Barker, was justified in striking back and that he used no more force than was necessary under the circumstances, to defend himself from a second blow, and in fact, therefore, not guilty, and he is accordingly discharged. And the court is adjourned."

The tumult that followed this decision is indescribable, many of Tom's friends among the boys shouted themselves hoarse. Bessie cried for joy and exclaimed, "Oh, Tom, you are free. You are free, and you have to go to prison. I'm so glad, I won't have to go to prison."

The Romance of Glen Eden

By Belle Strother
Author of Over the Skyline

I dared not move. Presently a girl dressed in blue came into the clearing. The birds began flocking about her as she placed the food for them on the shelves. She had beautiful brown eyes and hair. Everything seemed to know and love her. I thought as I saw her, that I would live her, too. I lay concealed by the spruce until the birds were busy eating, then quietly as possible, I picked up my rod and crept to the brook and so approached the glen from this direction. One lady of the birds was sitting on a stump and on her hand was perched a chickadee, cocking his sunny little head and his beady black eyes fixed on her face. She was smiling at him. Soon she discovered me and hastily rose to go.

"Good morning," I said, "please don't hurry, I want to talk to you about your birds." She hesitated a moment and said, "Oh, do you love them, too?" I replied that I have never studied them much. "I told her, 'but I know it must be interesting work.'"

"How did you ever tame them?" I asked. "Well," she replied, "we have lived here almost five years and I came here for flowers and there were so many beautiful birds. I couldn't resist the temptation to bring a few crumbs and see if they would eat them. They did, or at least some of the less timid ones did, so I have kept on, but I suppose I shall have to stop pretty soon." "But why?" I asked. "My aunt says I am getting too old," she said. "I am Lucy Morton. I live with my aunt, Mrs. Graham was my mother's sister."

"Well, I must be going," Aunt Jane will be needing me." "Goodbye," I said. "I hope we meet again." "Yes," she said. "Just a flash of blue and my vision was gone."

I could not wait any longer, I must tell the old folks, so I hurried home. Aunt Lucy scented something and as I went in she did not speak, but stared at me. "Well," I said and laughed, "what is the matter?" "You look so queer," she answered. "You look both puzzled and pleased, what have you been doing?" "I have seen a flash of blue in the Swamp Angel," I said. "Oh, did you see her and was it that Graham girl?" she asked. "Yes, I saw her, but she is not Graham's girl. I told Uncle Cyrus that she had just stepped in. 'Not Mr. Graham's girl!' he exclaimed. 'No,' I answered, 'her name is Miss Lucy Morton.' 'What?' they both spoke together. 'Why that is my name,' said Aunt Lucy. 'I know it,' I said, 'and I mean to learn more.' 'That is the strangest thing I ever heard of,' Uncle Cyrus said. 'I told me that Mrs. Graham was my mother's sister and that her aunt says she is getting too old to feed her birds.' 'What a pity,' said Aunt Lucy. 'I'll warrant you,' said Uncle Cyrus.

Here we dropped the subject as dinner was ready. "How many spotted ones did you get today?" Uncle Cyrus asked, and his eyes had a twinkle in them. "I did not fish today," I replied. "I'll warrant you, didn't I tell you I bet it was a lady? Always there's a girl in it sooner or later, ain't that so, Mother?" he asked. "I guess it is," she answered.

I passed the afternoon reading and thinking. There must be some mystery and I must turn detective, for if this girl should be Ruel Morton's daughter, Aunt Lucy was certainly going to see her.

The next morning I took my rod just for an excuse, but instead of going to the spruces, I went straight to the clearing and sat down on a stump. I had not been there long when I heard that low whistle and trill. Instantly the birds began to gather.

Seeing me, she said, "Good morning, you are early." "Yes," I replied, "I wanted to see you feed the birds. She went to the shelves and placed the food on them. One day persisted in telling her I was there.

"One has to be very quiet," she said, "the birds seem to know strangers. She sat down on another stump and together we watched them eat."

When they had finished eating and began to move off, she said, "Perhaps you would like to see fish." I said that I would, so we walked down to the pool. "Now wait just a little so they don't see your shadow, until they collect," she said. She made a little ripple on the surface of the pool and it seemed there were trout everywhere. She dropped some crumbs and they came to the top for them. "I can see now why no one can get up to these fish to bite," I remarked. She smiled and answered, "These are my trout."

"Well, I must be going back soon," she said. "Oh, I said, 'can't you stay a little longer? I like to talk to some one; it is kind of lonesome for me around here, just the old folks, you know.' 'I should think it might be, she said. 'Although I thought that old lady was lovely the day she called on us.'"

"Now," I said, "will you answer a question for me?" We were sitting on the bank of the brook. She answered, "Why, yes, if I can." "Will you tell me your father's name?" I asked. "Yes," she replied, "his name was Ruel Morton. He owned these woods." "Do you know who these old people are that I board with?" "No, I don't, I have seen very little of them." "They are your father's parents." She looked at me and her eyes filled with tears as she said, "I wish I had known this before. I never knew anything of my people. You see," she went on, "Aunt Jane is determined that I shall marry Ben, my older cousin, when I am eighteen, so they can get this wood lot to go with their farm. They are planning now where they will start cutting. I can't bear to think of all my years being driven off. I shall be eighteen next Thursday. Probably by Sunday I shall have to marry Ben. The bank president at the village is sort of glib for me, or at least, my father asked him to kind of look out for me. My father died when I was three years old and mother when I was born. He left quite a sum of money in the bank. I never knew him, how much, but Mr. Jones, the bank president, has looked after it, and paid the taxes on this land. Well, I must go now, Aunt would be angry if she knew I had met a young man in here." "Just one thing more," I said, "you know of course, that when you are eighteen, you are of age and can do as you please and marry whom you like. That is, if you don't marry your cousin. Now, next Thursday I want you to meet me here and go down and spend your birthday with the old folks. You can, you know, for you will be eighteen. It is time you spent part of your time with them. The old lady's name is Lucy, too. Will you come?"

"How I would love to if I dared. Am I named for her?" she asked. "Yes, you are named for her and there is nothing to fear," I told her. So she agreed and we parted again. I knew there was something besides birds that interested me.

I hurried home and ran into the house, nearly upsetting Aunt Lucy as I took her by the shoulders and looked into her eyes. "Well," I said, "I saw her and it is all arranged." "What is all arranged?" she asked. "Why, next Thursday she will be eighteen and is coming here to spend her birthday and she is Ruel Morton's little Lucy," I rattled on, then I told the whole story. "I'll warrant you," she said. "On the way to the bank with me. Do you know Mr. Jones, the president?" I asked. "I guess I do," he answered. So after dinner I took out the roadster and we started for the village.

As we neared the bank a man came out. He looked very displeased about something. When he had crossed the street, Uncle Cyrus said, "That was Mr. Graham." It came into my head in a minute what he was doing there.

Uncle Cyrus introduced me to Mr. Jones and I asked if he knew Miss Lucy Morton. He said, "Yes, and it seems to me people are awfully interested in her all at once." "Of course you know," I remarked, "that is his gentlemanly grandfather?" "What?" he exclaimed, "is that right, Uncle Cyrus, are you Ruel's father?" "I suppose I am," he said. "Well, then, I am your grandfather, he never talked much, and here I have known you for years. Anyway, I am mighty glad for that little girl. I hope you take her away from this place, Graham left here as you came in. He came to see if I wouldn't fix it so he could get that wood lot. Said Lucy was going to marry Ben West Sunday morning tomorrow." "But she isn't," I said. "I hope not," he replied.

We drove home and Aunt Lucy met us at the door. Uncle Cyrus told her what had happened. "Oh, father, could we take her? I should love to have her live with us. I will fix up Ruel's room for her," she said. "I don't know," he replied. "I suppose it would mean a row with the Grahams."

"Well, anyway," I said, she promised to come, Thursday. We can talk it over, then. We must prepare for her birthday. I will go to the village and get some candles and fixings for a cake, if you will make one," I said to Aunt Lucy. "I guess I will," she answered. "Just think you are and I have never done a thing for that little girl."

The next morning I did not go to the woods. I had a suspicion that Graham might be watching Lucy. But Tuesday morning I took my rod and started; when within hearing of the Glen, I thought I could hear voices, then I heard Lucy say, "You have been the best of me of any of them, Ben, but I can't marry you. You are my own cousin, you know. I like you as I might a brother, but that is all."

"Father will be awful mad if you don't," he was saying. "I shall be eighteen, Thursday, say, 'and I plan to go some place and work for myself.' 'Yes,' she answered. 'I think I have paid my board and Lord knows, I never had many clothes.' 'I guess you are right,' he said, 'and I will help you all I can.'"

"Thank you, Ben, you are a good boy and I wish you were in some other place," she said. After I had seen the view he took of it all, I snugged a twig down by the brook and made out I was just fishing. "Someone is trying to catch your fish," Ben said. "He won't have much luck," she answered. "I think I will go back to me, 'the folks don't know where I am.' 'I will be home before long,' she told him.

When he was out of hearing, Lucy came down to the pool. "Good morning," I said. "I thought she looked happier than I had ever seen her. 'You are looking fine this morning,' I remarked. 'Well, I have a big load on my shoulders,' she replied, "and I hope Ben tells Uncle John the first thing. Perhaps he will order me off and I hope he does. I can walk to the village and I can stay with Mr. Jones," she said. "You don't have to do that," I told her. "Your grandma is just crazy to have you come and live with her. What a change for you it would be!" I said. "Well, if they make an awful fuss, that is what I will do," she said. "I hope they make an awful fuss," I said. "I must go now and see if Ben has told. You need not be surprised to see me any time," she said. "Good-bye," I waved and hustled back to tell Aunt Lucy. When I told her, she said, "I never expected anything like this. It would never have come about if you had not come. I must get some new things for her room," she said. "I will take you to the village this afternoon," I said, "and I wish you would do her room a blue, you will know why when you see her, I know she would like it."

When dinner was over, we went to town and Aunt Lucy had the time her life buying various things. Her shopping over, we drove home and she wanted to start right in fixing things up. I told her I would be glad to help if she would like for me to do it.

"I'll warrant you," said Uncle Cyrus. I won't try to describe that room, but there were blue birds flying all around on the window drapes, etc. It was pretty as could be.

See us about that needed bathroom

It might as well be admitted—most houses need more bathrooms. But most home owners don't know costs or space requirements; so they can't decide whether that needed extra bathroom is really a possibility or not.

Why not let us do the measuring and figuring? We'll put the whole plan down in black and white for you to pass on—and not charge you for estimating, either. If you want the best work, finest fixtures (we sell the famous Kohler Ware), and fair and square prices, see us.

Deering Memorial Methodist Church. The pastor, Rev. Charles L. Kinney, will preach an inaugural sermon to the veterans of the G. A. R. and Veterans of the World War, who are to be guests, Sunday morning at 10:30 daylight time. The subject will be "When War Shall End".

The church school will be at 11:45. Evening service at 7:30.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinney came from Caribou, Aroostook County, where they served the Deering Memorial Methodist church for five years. They have two sons, Gerald and William, who will not be with them until later. Mr. Kinney is a graduate of Bangor Theological Seminary, class of 1912. A member of the Maine Methodist Conference since 1909, a trustee of Bucksport Seminary and a member of the Board of Ministerial Training of the Maine Conference. He has held pastorates in Thomaston, Brownville, and Bar Harbor. A member of the Blue Lodge and Chapter of Free Masons at Bangor, Me., and a member of the I. O. O. F. of the people of both church and parish have most cordially received their new pastor and wife, as evidenced in the services of the two Sundays they have been here, as well as in the functions of the church held during the week. At Caribou Mr. Kinney was a member of the Chamber of Commerce and on the Council of the Boy Scouts. Mrs. Kinney was a member of the Literary Club, the Lyric Club, a director of the Little Wanderer's Home and a member of the Charities Committee and of the Eastern Star.
